I

i The high forward vowel in Zulu; tongue-position somewhat lower than that for phon. cardinal vowel No. 1, with lips decidedly spread; this is a pure vowel, much as in the Northern English pronunciation of the word 'see'; Zulu i, even when short, is always tense, as in French. This vowel occurs short (i), long (i:) and with prolonged length (i::) in Zulu: it is normally long when penultimate in a word, and prolonged in certain ideophones; e.g. ní:na, isihá:mbi, iliví:la or i:ví:la, imí:ni, ukú:thi ɓihli, ukú:thi ɟikithi, ukú:thi zwí::. Current orthography does not mark the length, but a short stressed vowel in penultimate or antepenultimate position is indicated by a stress mark (e.g. ɓihli, cíkithi), and prolonged length may be indicated by doubling the vowel).

i- (i:) n. prefix. cl. 3 sg. (derived from original ili-).
igama, izwe, iqanda, ibulukwe.

i- cop. formative. [cf. v.l. yi-.]
ɓona > iɓona or iɓo (it is they).

i- enum. concd. cl. 5 sg. imbuzi inye (one goat). This concd. is sometimes elided with the stem -ni?, which is then used enclitically, e.g. Yintoni? (What thing is it? for Yinto ini?).

i- prefix ('penultimate -i'), used to balance the stress in the imperatives of monosyllabic verbs. [cf. v.l. yi-.]

i- subj. concd. [> -yi- when not initial.]
1. cl. 2 pl. Iminyaka iyadlula (The years pass).
2. cl. 5 sg. Inkosi ihambile (The chief has gone). Inkomo iɓigula (The beast was ill).

-i v. suffix used in forming present neg. tenses, e.g. Angiɓoni (I do not see < -ɓona). ezingahambi (they who do not travel < -hamba).

K

k Unvoiced velar explosive consonant. The aspirated form is written kh, q.v. In current Zulu orthography k represents two different sounds:
(i) k, radical form, devoid of aspiration but with slight voicing (with some speakers appearing to the European ear almost as g). This is 'soft-k', and occurs in the infin. prefix uku-, the adverbial formatives ku- and ka-, the feminine suffix -kazi, the intr. and neut. v. suffixes -ka, -eka, -akala, and sundry individual words, e.g. i(li)hlakani, inkuku, hleka, buka, etc.
(ii) kʔ, ejected form or 'sharp-k', always found in the nasal compound nk, e.g. nanku, inkabi; and further occurring in a limited number of words apart from n, e.g. kaka (kʔá:kʔa), i(li)kati (ilikʔá:tʔi). Wherever this occurs it is noted in dictionary entries, though not differentiated in current orthography.

ka- adv. formative, forming adverbs of manner from adj. and rel. stems, e.g. kahle (carefully) < -hle; kakhulu (exceedingly) < -khulu; kabuhlungu (painfully) < -buhlungu.

ka- poss. formative, used before nouns of Cl. 1a sg. This is preceded by the equivalent of the subjectival concd. for the possessee, when that contains a consonant. The initial vowel of the n. possessor is elided when ka- is prefixed. imbuzi kababa (my father's goat); izimbuzi zikababa (my father's goats); ikhasi likagwayi (a leaf of tobacco); okaFaku (Faku's married daughter); uMpande kaSenzangakhona (Mpande, son of Senzangakhona); wena kaJojo (thou son of Jojo).

1. Cl. 1 sg. Akafuni or Kafuni (He does not want). Ubaba akahambanga (My father did not travel).
2. Cl. 3 pl. [cf. -wa-.] Amahhashi akaphuzi (or kaphuzi) lamanzi (The horses do not drink this water). Akanakudla (They cannot eat).

-ka- subjectival concd. (subjunct. mood). [< a-] used when not initial.
1. Cl. 1 sg. Makahambe (Let him travel).
2. Cl. 3 pl. [cf. -wa-.] Amahhashi makadonse (Let the horses pull).

ka- v. aux. prefix, making hortative form of the subjunct. [cf. more usual ma-.] Kawuthule manje (Just be quiet now).

-ka- v. aux., used in neg. exclusive implication, to express 'not yet'. Abakafiki (They have not yet arrived). Womtshela engakahambi (Tell him, before he goes).

-ka v. deriv. suffix, denoting the intr. in formations from ideophones. [cf. -eka.] e.g. dázu (of splitting) > dazuka (get split); gódu (of going home) > goduka (go home).

m (m) Bilabial nasal consonant, pronounced as in English and occurring before vowels and homorganically before b and p.

m (m̩) Syllabic bilabial nasal. This is a contraction of original mu, written thus in short unstressed positions. It must be distinguished from unstressed mu in such a word as amukela. Note that such a word as umuzi (with mu in position of length and stress) becomes emzini, umzana when taking a suffix. Note also the occurrence of two m's in such words as: ummbila, maize (um̩mbi:la) and wamminza, he swallowed him (wa:m̩mi:ndza), where the first m is syllabic and the second homorganic or radical.

m (ŋ) Denti-labial nasal consonant, pronounced with upper teeth touching lower lips, found only as homorganic nasal before f and v in the combinations mf (ŋgpf) and mv (ŋɔɓv).

m- (syllabic) or mu- (when penult.); obj. concd. 1st cl. sg. Siyamɓona (We see him). ukumupha (to give to him).

ma- enum. concd. cl. 3 pl. amahhashi maphi? (which horses?); amantombazana mambe (other girls).

ma- v. aux. prefix, giving hortative form of the subjunct. [cf. a-.] Masivume (Let us consent). Makakhulume (Let him speak). Mawuhlale (Please sit down).

-ma- prefix.

1. used in forming compound nouns generally cl. 1a proper names indicating 'the daughter of' applied to married or 'lobolaed' women. (a) with the clan name: uMamhlongo (the daughter of the Mhlongo clan); uMagcaɓashe (the daughter of the Gcaɓashe clan). (b) with father's or grandfather's personal name: uMaguɓudele (the daughter of Guɓudele). In this case the form oka- (e.g. okaGuɓudele) is commoner in Zululand. (c) uMaɓani lo? (Whose daughter is this? or: To what clan does this woman belong?—applicable to married or 'lobolaed' woman).

2. also used in forming other cl. 1a nouns indicating plants, animals, etc. umaliɓombo (species of trailing plant); umazwenda (Uvaria Caffra plant); umahambanendlwana (wattle-bark caterpillar).

o: The mid-back vowel in Zulu. There are two distinct pronunciations of this vowel in Zulu, but as they belong to but one phoneme only one symbol is necessary in a practical orthography. The two pronunciations are: (i) o, close mid-back vowel; tongue-position slightly lower than that for phon. cardinal vowel No. 7; lips fully rounded and protruding. This is a pure vowel and is pronounced much as the Northern English in 'no', or the first element in the Southern English pronunciation of the same vowel. This vowel occurs short (o) and long (o:) without change of quality. (ii) ɔ, open mid-back vowel; tongue-position slightly lower than that for phon. cardinal vowel No. 6; lips well rounded and somewhat protruding. This is a pure vowel with acoustic effect similar to that of the Southern English pronunciation of 'or', and closely resembling the first part of the diphthong in 'boy' (bɔi). This vowel occurs short (ɔ), long (ɔ:) and with prolonged length (ɔ::) in Zulu: it is normally long when penult. in a word, and prolonged in certain ideophones. Examples: no:бa:ni, lo:lu, oluбisi:ni, lɔ:lɔ, inkᵛɔ:-mɔ, бɔ:na, uku:thi ƀkhɔkɔlozi, uku:thi ntᵛɔ::. These would be written in the current orthography as follows: nobani, lolu, olubisini, lolo, inkomo, бona, ukuthi xhókolozi, ukuthi ntoo.

The rules governing the quality interpretation of these two vowels are as follows: (a) If the vowel of the succeeding syllable in the same word (or word-group) be i or u, or if the succeeding syllable consist of syllabic m, the mid-back vowel is of high quality (o). (b) If the vowel of the succeeding syllable in the same word (or word-group) be other than i or u, the mid-back vowel is of low quality (ɔ). (c) If the mid-back vowel be long and in a position where there is no main stress, it is always of high quality, despite the quality of the vowel of the succeeding syllable.
